PURPOSE

In September 2014, President Obama issued a challenge to cities, towns, counties, and tribes across the country to join the My Brother’s Keeper (MBK) Community Challenge as “MBK Communities.” The Challenge encourages communities (cities, rural municipalities, and tribal nations) to implement a coherent cradle-to-college-and-career strategy for improving the life outcomes of all young people to ensure that they can reach their full potential.

As an MBK Community leader, you have accepted this call to action indicating your commitment to enacting sustainable change in your community across some or all of the following key milestone areas identified by the May 2014 MBK Task Force Report:

1. Entering school ready to learn
2. Reading at grade level by third grade
3. Graduating from high school ready for college and career
4. Completing post-secondary education or training
5. Successfully entering the workforce
6. Reducing violence and providing a second chance

This guide is intended as an informational resource to support your MBK Community Challenge efforts. It introduces an illustrative sample of key principles, practices, and resources to consider in building your local initiatives. These materials are not meant as requirements and are not intended to be exhaustive or definitive. Ideas and resources may not apply equally in every community as there is no one-size-fits-all solution to these complex issues. Our hope is that you will build on the illustrative examples highlighted in this resource guide, adapting them to create tailored solutions for your community.

OBJECTIVES

After reading this guide, you should:

- Build a high-level understanding of milestone-specific issues, critical players to engage, and key considerations in activating your community around this issue
- Recognize evidence-based practices and examples of programmatic success that can be adapted to meet local community needs
- Conduct a detailed needs assessment benchmarking current performance on the critical metrics for each of the six milestones
- Begin to understand institutional resources available for use in launching local initiatives
- Identify outstanding questions to address when developing local solutions
- Feel empowered to drive systemic change in your community

CONTENT OVERVIEW

This guide is designed to support your planning and execution process through a series of three core steps: first, it helps you (1) build an understanding of the milestone-specific issue area; then it (2) identifies several illustrative leading practices to help inspire your approach; and finally, it provides a selection of (3) key resources to help guide you as you begin to take action.

(1) Build Understanding

- Milestone Overview: an introduction to the key drivers affecting the milestone issue area, as outlined in the MBK Task Force Report published in May 2014
- Engaging Your Community Ecosystem: initial thoughts on how to mobilize key stakeholders within your community to create joint accountability and a shared vision
- Key Principles: milestone-specific thought leadership to help provide a trusted foundation for local action

(2) Identify Leading Practices

- Evidence-Based Practices: illustrative set of effective milestone-specific practices included to help inspire policy and program development in your community
- Programmatic Success from the Field: sample of strategies and programs communities have used to improve outcomes on this milestone - demonstrating how to apply and adapt leading practices to meet local needs

(3) Take Action

- Turning Theory Into Action – Institutional Resources: examples of resources to help you begin to create change, organized by key drivers outlined within the milestone overview

MILESTONE OVERVIEW

All children should be safe from violent crime; and individuals who are confined should receive the education, training, and treatment needed to have a real second chance.

On the path to adulthood, youth may fall victim to violence or experience an interaction with the juvenile and criminal justice systems that permanently alters their trajectory for the worse. While crime and incarceration rates have generally decreased across the United States in recent years, violence continues to plague many communities and disproportionately affect communities of color. Persons of color disproportionately have contact with law enforcement, are overrepresented in correctional settings, and face disparate treatment in the juvenile justice system. Our criminal justice data needs to be improved to help us better understand the underlying issues in this realm.

ENGAGING YOUR COMMUNITY ECOSYSTEM

A key next step toward driving change involves assessing community needs, with a focus on engaging and connecting key stakeholder groups,* including:

*These key stakeholder groups are meant to serve as an illustrative sampling, to be validated and adapted as relevant to your specific community.

KEY PRINCIPLES

1. The trust between law enforcement and the communities they serve can be strengthened through deliberate efforts to facilitate racial reconciliation, enhance procedural justice, and reduce implicit bias.

2. There is tremendous opportunity for policies and practices to help address the disproportionate contact of overrepresented youth with law enforcement and the juvenile and criminal justice systems. Where contact occurs, policies and practices should be implemented to reduce reliance on confinement and produce better outcomes for those who do enter the system.

3. Successful reentry programs are critical to addressing the many needs of and challenges faced by individuals released from prison, jail, or juvenile facilities. Services provided through reentry programs support individuals in making the initial transition back to the community and facilitate the development of skills needed to reduce the likelihood of future criminal activity. Multifaceted reentry and rehabilitation programs address necessities such as housing, medical care, and emergency assistance. These programs also assist individuals in obtaining educational support services, job training, as well as mental health and substance abuse counseling through referrals to community-based service providers. Furthermore, successful reentry programs address workforce development and reduce hiring barriers / collateral consequences that place returning citizens at a disadvantage when searching for viable employment.

To drive real change in our community, we must seek opportunities to:

- Reduce Violence in High-Risk Communities by Integrating Public Health Approaches
- Reform the Juvenile and Criminal Justice Systems to Keep Youth and Young Adults on Track
- Encourage Law Enforcement and Neighborhoods to Work Together
- Eliminate Unnecessary Barriers to Reentry and Encourage Fair Chance Hiring Options
- Address Possibility of Disproportionate Minority Contact
- Improve Data

For a more detailed explanation of these drivers, see the My Brother’s Keeper Task Force Report, May 2014, http://www.whitehouse.gov/sites/default/files/docs/053014_mbk_report.pdf
Practice 1: Group-based Violence Intervention
Group-based violence intervention focuses enforcement and social service resources on the small number of individuals most likely to commit violent crimes. First developed by the Boston Gun Project, it uses a focused deterrence strategy to directly communicate the consequences of violence to at-risk gang members. When implemented with fidelity, the intervention has generated between a 31 percent and 63 percent reduction in homicides in cities across the country, while contributing to a decrease in shots-fired calls and gun assaults.

Practice 2: Justice Reinvestment
Justice reinvestment is a data-driven approach to improve public safety, examine corrections and related criminal justice spending, manage and allocate criminal justice populations in a more cost-effective manner, and reinvest savings in strategies that can hold individuals offenders accountable, decrease crime, and strengthen neighborhoods. Justice reinvestment provides technical assistance to states and localities as they collect and analyze data on drivers of criminal justice populations and costs, identify and implement changes to increase efficiencies, and measure both the fiscal and public safety impacts of those changes. Research has shown that justice reinvestment could save the nation billions of dollars over the next decade.

Practice 3: Reducing Unnecessary Use of Detention
Local juvenile detention alternative initiatives operate across the country to keep low-risk juveniles out of detention and increase the adoption of more effective interventions. Since its launch, sites participating in juvenile detention alternative initiatives have reduced their average daily detention populations by 43 percent.

Practice 4: Eliminate Disproportionate Minority Contact
The Models for Change program stresses local innovation to juvenile justice reform. The initiative supports a network of government and court officials, legal advocates, educators, community leaders, and families, focused on developing research-based tools and techniques to make juvenile justice more equitable, rational, and developmentally appropriate.

EVIDENCE-BASED PRACTICES
This section is intended as an informational resource to support your MBK Community Challenge efforts. It introduces an illustrative sample of principles, practices, and resources to consider in building your local initiatives. Ideas and resources may not apply equally in every community as there is no one-size-fits-all solution to these complex issues.

PROGRAMMATIC SUCCESS IN THE FIELD
The following programs are highlights received from organizations participating in the MBK Community Challenge. Their efforts are not sponsored, supervised, or independently evaluated by the U.S. Government.

Snapshot 1: Neighborhood Opportunity Network (NeON) – New York, NY
The NeON initiative is a decentralized, community-based probation approach that is tailored to the unique needs of neighborhoods with a high concentration of individuals on probation. The core component of a NeON site is a network of community organizations, government agencies, local businesses, and community residents that connects probation clients to opportunities, resources, and services. The network aims to improve clients’ outcomes and make communities safer and stronger.

Key Takeaways
- By working in their clients’ communities and building supportive relations between the department and local communities, probation officers are more engaged with their clients and their families, and more likely to collaborate on community events and projects
- Initial outcomes reveal that six-month re-arrest rates are lower among clients aged 16-24 assigned to a NeON site (25.6 percent), compared to individuals with the same risk level assigned to a traditional probation caseload (33.1 percent)
